

Biography

DEBISTUTI SAHA

Debistuti Saha, a fourth-year undergraduate medical student, currently pursuing MBBS in Regional Institute of Medical Sciences, Imphal has been consistently amongst the top 10 percent in the university for the past 3 years. Besides her academic performance, she has been deeply invested in the research works and has published a paper on COVID-19 and is currently involved in migraine study and sleep disorders.

With keen interest in neurosciences, particularly developing improved management strategies of some of the quite common yet life threatening neurological complications like stroke, dementia, she aims to improve the prognosis of patients suffering from different neurological conditions. Her research interest developed in high school when she was awarded the KVPY Scholarship at the national level that aims to inspire young researchers.

She is an active member of AAN (American Association of Neurology), IYNA (International Youth Neurosciences Association) and SAC (Students Against COVID) and aims to create a global platform for sharing of knowledge and broadening the outlook of the medical community around the world by taking part as well as organizing journal review meets, and research collaborations and case discussions.